

Dear Whiskey lover,

On the following pages are but a few, which we'd love to have available all year round. Alas, global demand and constant changes to pricing and production options have an impact on availability.

In New Zealand for example where the consumption of the Japanese collection barely registers on a global scale it can prove to be difficult to maintain consistency in supply. Much effort goes into maintaining a reasonable level of choices, however, please bare with us as at times your first choice may not be available.

ISLAY

Often called the 'Whisky Island' due to only eight distilleries there. The island produces very distinct malts, generally heavily peated and smoky in flavour.

HIGHLANDS

This is the largest area of Scotland and also distilleries. As such the variance in flavours and finish can vary greatly. With this in mind the whiskies can range from dry to sweet, some even having a touch of smoke and peat, overall however they are thought to have more of a kick. Naturally as per minimum requirements, all are aged in their barrels for at least 3 years.

SPEYSIDE

Technically Speyside lies within the Highland region. It is home to approximately half of Scotland's malt whisky distilleries. This small area of land produces mellow, sweet, and at times fruit aromatic whiskies.

IRISH

Most Irish pot still whiskey is distilled three times, while most (but not all) Scotch whisky, is distilled twice. Peat is rarely used in the malting process, so often Irish whiskey can have a smoother finish as opposed to the smoky, earthy overtones common to some Scotches.

JAPANESE

Broadly speaking Japanese whisky is much more similar to the Scottish style than any other. Production dates back to 1870 in Japan. Although it was all to create whisky for the local market, today Japanese single malts are widely respected, often beating some of Scotland's best in blind tastings.

BOURBON

Bourbon whiskey is a type of American whiskey: a barrel-aged distilled spirit made primarily from corn. Although the name "Bourbon" was applied in the 1850s, and the true Kentucky etymology was advanced by the 1870s, the invention or origin of bourbon is to date somewhat of a myth with varying stories. From the invention by a pioneering Baptist minister and distiller named Elijah Craig, to it being named after Bourbon St in New Orleans.

One thing we do know : we love to drink it.

NEW ZEALAND WHISKIES

New Zealand whiskies are a collection of predominantly single malt whiskies with a few blended available. The origins date back to December of 1969 when the Baker family went into production with its first release in 1974, at the time named Wilson Distilleries.

Located in Dunedin, it was the most Southerly whisky distillery in the world. Over the years, it has been passed through various global beverage companies, finally ceasing production in 1997-2000. Since then, a few attempts have been made at re-igniting what was left of the original distillations, and these have now finally been rebranded under a new passionate and invigorative stewardship. Although there are a few active distilleries currently in New Zealand, production is extremely limited at this time and mostly exported, with future releases eminent and hotly anticipated.

In the mean time, we have put together a small selection of those rare original distillations which are slowly approaching the end of the line. So why not join us for a drop of history from the few barrels that remain?
